

In Memoriam

Andrew Heiskell

In July, IIE received the news of the passing of our beloved Trustee, the noted publisher and philanthropist Andrew Heiskell. Andrew rose from being a reporter at LIFE magazine to become Chairman and CEO of Time Inc. In the years since his retirement, he devoted himself to philanthropic leadership, serving as Chairman of the New York Public Library and the American Academy in Rome, and working with numerous other organizations in New York and around the world.

Andrew had an enduring commitment to bettering the world through international education. He gave generously of his time and talent, serving as a member of IIE's Board of Trustees and as a former Chairman of the Executive Committee. His leadership was particularly evident during IIE's 75th anniversary in 1994, when Andrew worked tirelessly with business and government leaders in developing and chairing a prestigious 75th Anniversary Forum on the role of international education in a world shaped by international communications and a global economy.

"It is always flattering to be asked to help some good cause... I consider it citizenship."

— Andrew Heiskell

He believed, especially after 9/11, that international education was one of the surest ways to make the world a less dangerous place.

His interest in supporting the best and most innovative work in the field led the Institute to create the Andrew Heiskell Awards for Innovation in International Education to showcase campus-based initiatives that promote study abroad, faculty programs, and internationalizing the campus. In 2003, we gave out the second round of Andrew Heiskell Awards at our Board meeting in New York and at a luncheon on Capitol Hill.

Paul Simon

On December 9th we learned of the death of another of our Trustees, Senator Paul Simon.

Paul had served on the IIE Board since his retirement from the U.S. Senate in 1997. Since then he had been on the faculty of Southern Illinois University where he created a public policy institute.

Paul's political career began with his election to the state legislature in 1954. He was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1974, and to the Senate in 1984, where he was highly respected as a reformer. One former colleague, Senator Edward M. Kennedy, referred to him as "the conscience of the Senate."

In the last months of his life, he lobbied for federal financial assistance to help more U.S. students to study abroad. Paul conceived of the Abraham Lincoln Study Abroad Fellowship Program, which would enable some 500,000 undergraduates to study abroad. This was to commemorate the 200th anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birth. Enactment of this program would be an appropriate and lasting legacy.
