About IIE’s Center for Academic Mobility Research • www.iie.org/mobility

The IIE Center for Academic Mobility Research brings together the Institute’s in-house research expertise with leading minds from around the world to conduct and disseminate timely and relevant research and policy analysis in the field of international student and faculty mobility. The Center provides applied research and program evaluation services to domestic and international governmental agencies, nongovernmental organizations, corporations, and foundations. The Center’s in-depth books and reports, including the well-known Open Doors Report on International Educational Exchange, supported by the U.S. Department of State, are key reference resources. In addition, the Center’s policy papers and snapshot surveys capture trends in the changing landscape of international education.

The core activities of the Center fall within three key areas:
• Driving policy and program decisions through applied research and analysis
• Fostering and disseminating knowledge
• Training the next generation of mobility researchers
